WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 6, 1879.

If you are willing to settle with such of the bondholders as have proposed to settle on the basis of 50 and 4, voted "Accepted" tomorrow.

If you want to encourage and strengthen the repudiation party in Tennessee, which, through the teachings of demagogues has steadily gained strength for ten years, go to the polls tomorrow and vote "Rejected." By doing so you will gain the approbation of John H. Savage and his associates—repudiationists.

COL. MOSES WHITE, of this city, has been doing good work for the 50-4 proposition. He met Col. Savage at two of his appointments last week, Charleston and Sweetwater, and we hear his speeches spoken of in the very highest terms. He was more than a match for Col. Savage in all the arguments presented, and made friends by the gentlemanly tone of his speeches.

REPUBLICANS ON THE STATE DEBT QUESTION.

At a meeting of Republicans, embracing some of the most prominent business men of Chattanooga, held last Saturday night, the following address was adopted:

"To the Voters of Hamilton and Adjoining Counties:

"The undersigned Republicans of Chattanooga and Hamilton county, hereby earnestly counsel our fellow Republicans of this and adjoining counties, to support on the 7th of August the proposition for the compromise of the State debt, as we believe the good name of the State and its present and future prosperity largely depend upon the acceptance of the proposed compromise.

"While we advise acceptance, we do not wish to be understood as endorsing the action of the Democratic Legislature in presenting the proposition to the people of Tennessee.

"As Republicans, we believe that the highest consideration of morality, justice and expediency require that good faith should be kept with the public creditors.

"We have no sympathy with repudiation in any form. We believe the State debt, with perhaps insignificant exceptions, was honestly contracted, and the State and the people have long since had value received, and we believe the debt should be paid dollar for dollar.

"We do not believe the State should repudiate one-half its just indebtedness, and we recognize fully the principle that the obligation of contracts should be as sacredly respected by States as by individuals. But the question before us is a practical question, purely. No interest has been paid on the State debt for years, and the debt is mounting up at the rate of a million and a quarter of dollars per annum and every day a settlement is postponed increases the difficulties of such settlement.

"The larger the public burden the more disinclined will be the people to attempt its removal.

"Moreover, we can not disguise the fact that the Democratic masses of the State of Tennessee have become in good part demoralized. For years Democratic newspapers, Democratic stump speakers and Democratic platforms have been preaching public dishonesty, and have been making repudiation familiar to the public mind and a large proportion of the people of the State are now in favor of repudiating the entire State debt.

"We feel satisfied that if the proposed compromise is not accepted the public creditors will not get a dollar of the principal, or interest of the debt.

"If we believed that a more satisfactory proposition, one more consonant with the equities of the creditors and the dignity of the State would ever be presented for the action of the people, in case the present proposed compromise was defeated, we would hesitate not a moment to aid in the defeat.

"But we are convinced that we shall have no second opportunity of acting upon the question.

"We do not pretend to say the honor of the State is saved in case the compromise should prevail. We only say that a half a loaf is better than no bread.

"The State of Tennessee can not afford to have it trumpeted to all the world that it has, by a vote of its people, refused to pay even fifty cents on the dollar of its indebtedness.

"The State will be forever discredited in the eyes of the world, and immigration and capital and prosperity will avoid its limits as men avoid a pestilence.

"Every consideration of duty and interest urge the acceptance of the proposed compromise. It is a question that rises far above party and party interests.

"We propose to vote and work for the acceptance of the compromise, not as being what we would like, but as being the best we can get, and we advise our fellow Republicans to go to the polls on Thursday next and do likewise.

FIFTY-FOUR MEETING IN ROGERSVILLE.

Speeches by Hon. A. A. Taylor and J. Harvey Mathes.

ROGERSVILLE, Aug. 4, 1879.

MR. EDITOR: It seems that the State debt compromise, which is to be settled on the 7th inst., is the all absorbing topic among the sovereigns of good old Hawkins just now, that is, judging from the immense crowd that was in Rogersville to-day. It had been announced that the Hon. A. A. Taylor, and Messrs. J. Harvey Mathes and Gen. G. P. M. Turner, of Memphis, would address the citizens upon that subject at the court house.

Little Alf was long and anxiously looked for until the hour of our arrival, and he, up to this time, having failed to put in his personal appearance, the Hon. J. Harvey Mathes was introduced by Judge John A. McKinney, by a few very appropriate remarks, after which Mr. Mathes calmly and dispassionately left off with a very sensible, argumentative and logical discourse upon the subject of the compromise. Mr. Mathes dealt mainly in facts and figures and was decidedly sensible in all he said. The remarks of Mr. Mathes had continued but a short time, when a considerable stir in the audience was perceptible, which in a moment was discovered to be caused by the presence of the Hon. A. A. Taylor, who had ridden from Rogersville Junction since 10 o'clock in order to meet his appointment. His presence was greeted by a round of applause from the entire audience. In fact, the Hawkins boys are always glad to see "Alf."

After the conclusion of Mr. Mathes, Mr. Taylor was introduced in his own happy and inimitable style, by the "gentleman from Hawkins," Col. James White.

Mr. Taylor made a telling speech. He warned the boys up to a sense of the duty that was to be performed by them at the polls on the 7th inst. His speech and advice as to how to act upon the very important question had a marked effect upon his audience. It made an impression that will be long remembered. We would be glad to give you his speech in full, but time and space forbid that we give more than a brief sketch of what he said. Among other things he said:

"If the compromise is defeated, it will be a triumph of the repudiation sentiment in the State. The evils of repudiation can not be told. Tennessee is rich in undeveloped resources. Her mountains are vast ore beds of valuable metals; her valleys abound in fertile soil; her limitless water power offers superior inducement to the machinist and manufacturer. It is an

"Enchanting land, where nature showers her fairest fruits and gaudiest flowers—Where stately forests wide expand, Inviting the industrious hand."

"But we can not avail ourselves of these almost boundless resources, of ourselves—we are too poor to develop them. Their development depends upon the immigration of capital and skilled labor. What capitalist will enter our open doors and invest his dollars here if we permit the triumph of repudiation? What laborer, skilled or unskilled, will come among us if we permit the stigma of repudiation to rest upon the good name of the State? What one of you—were your mind made up to leave this country—would seek your home in a State which had dishonored itself by the act of repudiation? What one of you, had you money to invest, would risk it among a people that would deliberately vote to repudiate an honest debt? Tennessee has, hitherto, borne an honorable name. She is known of all men as the volunteer State. She has occupied a front rank among the sisterhood of States. America is covered all over with military glory; her orators and statesmen have given her celebrity throughout Christendom. Whatever of military glory America has won for herself in her contests of the past; whatever of honorable renown America enjoys among the nations of the earth because of her achievements in the field of eloquence and statesmanship, Tennessee is entitled to her share. Tennessee's soldiery has ever won laurels in the thickest of the fight. Her orators and statesmen have ever been the equals of any and the inferiors to none. Tennessee has furnished three Presidents of America—Jackson, Polk and Johnson. Shall she now bring reproach upon her good name? Shall she? I ask you again. Answer next Thursday at the polls. Shall she, with her own hand, stamp the brand of dishonor upon her brow and wear it through the ages? Shall she, I ask you my countrymen, the solemn question? Answer it Thursday. Shall Tennessee, with her own hand, blacken her history with a disgrace of which she can never rid herself by any power on earth, either in time or eternity? Shall she? I ask you. My prayer is, God forbid it.

Upon the conclusion of Mr. Taylor's speech, long and vociferous applause followed.

After the crowd had become somewhat quiet, the Hon. G. P. M. Turner, of Memphis, was introduced by Sam. L. Chesnut, Esq., as the silver-tongued orator of the West. He is a most candid, happy and facetious orator. His talk had its weight with the Hawkins boys. Mr. Turner made many friends and acquaintances to-day by reason of well-timed remarks. Count Hawkins solid for the compromise.

HAWKINS.

Judge Butler speaks at Greenville.

GREENVILLE, Aug. 2, 1879.

MR. EDITOR: This being Saturday, and, in consequence of the heavy rains, making the ground too wet for our farmers to plough, there was an unusual number of the country people in town, besides it had been pretty well known that Judge Butler would address the people here to-day. The announcement was made from the balcony of the court house, and very soon a large crowd assembled, eager to hear what the Judge had to say upon the State debt question. The close attention of the audience throughout to the eloquent and logical speech, delivered in the Judge's usual happy and forcible style, stating the facts and figures so plainly as to reach the understanding of all who were present, gave evidence that the audience were deeply interested, and anxious to be correctly informed, and it is believed few, if any, left the court house unable to decide how they should vote on the day of election, and not a man expressed himself as unconvinced that he owed it as a duty to himself and his posterity to accept the compromise of 50-4, and that by so doing he would vindicate the honor and dignity of the State. Judge Butler assured the people that the question was one of vital importance to every citizen of the State—that it was no party issue—that it was neither a Democratic or Republican measure—that the question was advocated, and opposed, by both political parties. The Judge's popularity is not confined to his own party friends, but very many of his strongest personal friends are Democrats. This is not only the case in Greene county, but so throughout this entire Congressional District. Socially, no man is more popular.

On Monday next Maj. Pettibone will address the people at this place, and as it is County Court day, a large crowd may be expected in town. Perhaps no man in the State is better posted on the question of National and State finances than Maj. Pettibone, and no man is more capable of making himself better understood. His reputation for scholarship, and his ability as a logical and eloquent debater is known throughout the State, and as a gentleman morally, socially, and intellectually, he is honored and respected by all who know him, regardless of party and politics.
